Join us for a fun opportunity over Zoom to speak with library staff and a local community bank officer about ways to make initial financial decisions, including:

- Picking a checking or savings account, what direct deposit is, and whether or not a having a check book "matters."
- Connecting with library books and other helpful resources, including a review of Consumer Reports online.
- Talking with other middle grade and high school students as part of a community conversation about money!

Registration closes 10/27/21. Participants will receive a Zoom link the day of the program.

This program was made possible with a Libraries Transforming Communities grant distributed by the American Library Association.
